Club Newsletter for April 2014

President's Krausening

By Mark Rames

Greetings SNOBs!

March's meeting included an interesting presentation by Patrick Daniels on his Halluter Hop Experience where he traveled to the Halluter region and worked a hop farm for a month, giving us a very detailed and even surprising insight on how our hops get from field to the brew kettle. I was also bailed out by the Chris and Pat Cain after Hop Union had to cancel a visit to Cleveland, where they talked about their gold medal Black Nugget IPA and the evolution of their recipe. Thanks guys!

For a full recap of the March meeting go to the recap link on Facebook at this link .

Everyone needs to make a note of this, our April 7th meeting will be at Great Lakes Tasting Room and not at the Sachsenheim. The start time has also changed to 6:30PM. We will get to hear about and sample the newly re-brewed Sumerian beer, a beer first brewed over 4000 years ago. A huge thank you to Great Lakes for this opportunity. Here is a map and details. Please do not bring any alcohol to GLBC. But I'll bet you can buy some there. They do not have food available in the tasting room.

The BJCP study class is almost half done with attendance being between 50-58 folks each meeting. Another BIG thank you to Andy and our hosts and presenters for this very large commitment of time to teach the rest of us! The classes are very interesting and well received and we have actually been picking up new class mates as we move forward.

Akron club SAAZ held their annual competition Wizard of SAAZ on March 8th and I'm proud to announce that the SNOB have retained possession of the Cuyahoga Cup, primarily due to the awesome medaling of Todd Donnelly and Paul Shick and several other SNOB members combining for 51 medal points against the SAAZ 47 points. Congrats to all of you and huge thanks to the SAAZ for hosting their leg of the Cuyahoga Cup for 2014. And you know what's cool? The Fathead's Tasting Room will be the public home for the Cuyahoga Cup whenever the SNOB have it, look for it next time you stop by for a beer.

The Beer No Sweat bus trip to Indiana is on for April 12-13! We will be making at least 9 stops over the two days at some great beer places and should have a jockey box on the bus to hold us over between stops. If you have that $130 still burning a hole in your pocket, think about joining a bus full of fellow SNOBs on a two-day brewery tour. We have had some cancellations due to the economy so if you still would like to make the trip or bring a friend along, let me know ASAP.

Big Brew is coming up fast, May 10. And it will be held at the Fathead's Production Brewery again this year, thank you to Matt and the Fathead's crew for being such great supporters of the SNOB. The beer will ferment and barrel-age at Fathead's and that my friends will make our life easier. The recipe has been set, an Imperial Stout that will be aged in an oak bourbon barrel. It will be a fun filled day, hope to see you there.

The Shaker Historical Society has approached the SNOB about putting on a homebrew demo on one or both days, June 14 and 15 at their 10th Annual Gracious Gardens of Shaker Heights event. New SNOB member Bruce Waddell has stepped up and volunteered to do a demo on Saturday but can't do Sunday. Anyone not going to NHC feel inclined? Let me know.

If you looking to further your formal education, Tri-C is offering a second go-around of their new homebrew class. The class will be four Tuesday evenings in May starting May 6th at 6:00p held at the Market Garden Brewery. The first night will be three hours and the rest will be two hours. The cost is $74.99 (it is through the college). Andy Tveekrem is hosting the class at Nano brew and Market Garden Brewery. The class will help brew a batch of homebrew at Nano, learn the science of brewing, bottle the homebrew, do a tasting (extra minimal charge) at Market Garden, and tour the Market Garden Brewery. If interested, registration is now open at <http://www.tri-c.edu/enrichment/Community/Pages/CulinaryClasses>.

aspx. At this time, no college credit will be given for this class.

OK, I need to shut up but I must put this bug in all ya all's ear first. part2pictures out of New York is going to film a documentary, probably aired on OWN TV, about home brewers and home brewing. But its more than that, they want to focus on the brewing community and the brew club. This could, if we wanted to participate, involving filming at Big Brew, campouts, competitions, meetings and even individuals homes during their brew day. What do you think? Let me know and as I get more details on just what all is involved I will pass it on.

Don't forget! Our April 7th meeting will be at Great Lakes Tasting Room and the start time is 6:30PM. Don't go to the Sachs! And please do not bring any alcohol to Great Lakes Brewing!
